An Evening Echo.
If I have faltered more or less
In my great task of happiness;
If I have moved among my race
And shown no glorious morning face;
If beams from happy human eyes
Have moved me not, if morning skies
Books, and my food, and summer rain
Knocked on my sullen heart in vain—
Lord, thy most potent pleasure take
And stab my spirit broad awake;
Or, Lord, if too obdurate I,
Choose thou, before that spirit die,
And piercing rain, a killing wind,
And to my dead heart run them in!
—ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON.

Still Going Up.
There is wide comment on the act of the Democratic national administration's conviction of itself as having made pledges that it has failed to keep, especially the pledge in the last presidential campaign that it would reduce the high cost of living, if given the reins of government. This conviction was made when the department of labor a few days ago announced the results of an official investigation made by the government. With the protective tariff virtually destroyed, to which the Democratic party in the 1912 campaign attributed the high cost of living, that cost has soared higher and higher, thus showing the fallacy of the Democratic contention. On this subject the Washington Post aptly says:
More than two years ago and a half have passed since the people voted for the removal of protection and the lowering of the cost of living. A majority, it is true, voted for the candidates who favored a continuation of the protective policy, but because the majority divided their votes under two protection, the Democratic solid vote of the minority, constituting a plurality, carried the day.
Two years ago the protective tariff was destroyed. Yet the trend of the cost of living is still upward. Prices are higher now than they were under the tariff. For fifteen years articles which are served on the table of the workingmen of the United States the average price for the year 1914 was two per cent higher than in 1913. And the average price was five and one-half per cent higher than in 1912.
The figures which show the steady increase despite the fact that sixty-one per cent of all imports are now coming in free, are not the result of any compilation from Republican sources, but are the official result of an investigation made by the department of labor under the present administration.

Back to Republican Party.
At this time three years ago the press of the country, especially the Democratic, was filled with articles and comments as to the Progressive or third party movement. It was activity all along the line among those who had decided that Colonel Roosevelt must run for president. A lively campaign was on in his behalf and the country was particularly active in politics.

Two years later the columns of Democratic newspapers were replete with glowing accounts of what Progressives were expected to do. There is a striking change now. It is seldom that a Democratic newspaper mentions the Progressive party, really found, serenely unconscious of the fact that a war was going on in Europe. Happy family—Wheeling intelligencer.

Lost.
Can anybody tell us what has become of Hon. Uncle Presley Morris? When last seen he was passing through Charleston on his way north for the summer. Can somebody locate the Dean Emeritus?—Charleston Gazette.

The Guard Comes Back.
Announcement of arrangements for the regular encampment of the West Virginia national guard is particularly cheering, since it looks for a tonic as though the guard was destined to demoralization born of financial neglect. However the chasm has been bridged and the guard saved at a time when most needed. General Bond, who is ambitious to build up the West Virginia organization to the point of unexcelled efficiency, now has the opportunity to

Mrs. Francis Alton Connolly (left) and Mrs. Richard Henry Booth, in their wedding finery.

Miss Hunter became the bride of Francis Alton Connolly, a young broker, on June 8. On June 16 Miss Moore married Richard Henry Booth, a lieutenant in the United States navy.

They Did It Well.
We have the Virginia debt case, but let us say that the present state officials are to be congratulated. It is generally said that up to the present administration West Virginia had made very little defense that was worthy of the name. When the present officials came into office they went at it with a will and saved the state many millions of dollars. We do not always agree with what some of them do at times, or what all of them do at other times at Charleston, but we hasten to commend commissioners, governor and attorney general in this instance for their energy and determination in fighting this case. The governor has been active in securing evidence and data, and he took a personal interest in settling the claims of the bond holders and the attorney general has handled the legal end of the case with marked ability and success, even though judgment went against us.—Bluefield Telegraph.

GET THE HOOK.

"The course of true love
Hath many hard hits,
It's so everywhere,
Said Verhaden Spritts.

Somewhere on the plains of Arizona, without pause, without rest, a long lanky farmer is running furiously.

Tired of driving furrows and taking cattle in solitude, Verhaden Spritts advertised in the Midwestern Breeze for a wife.

He received one answer, which read:

"Meet the Wednesday morning train. I will wear Woodrow pink. Sisabelle."

On Wednesday morning two females stepped off the train at Spawfield. One was three octaves higher than blue bird, the other was one of the world's ten most scrumptious beauties.

Verhaden Spritts stepped up to the latter.

"Scuse, miss," he said, "but is your name Sisabelle?"

"The idea," she replied indignantly. "No it's not, and it's none of your business what my name is. My name is Prunella." And she walked naughtily away. Verhaden Spritts took one more glance at the remaining female and fled due east.

SIDEWALK CHARGING BATTERY.

A side-walk charging battery for recharging electric vehicles, is one of the latest additions to the city garage. It consists of a small slate box mounted upon an electrical welded pole. It has a steel, spring-locked door and contains an ammeter, pilot lamp, rheostat tubes and a main line switch.

Connections are made through an underground cable. The motorist, whose electric current fails, applies to an employee of the garage, who unlocks the box and makes the connection for recharging the battery in the machine. A provision for measuring the amount of current used is included, and this fixes the price to be paid for the service. This convenience will enable the electric vehicle to be recharged as readily as the gasoline motor is provided with addition fuel when its supply runs short.

In the Bible, Old and New Testaments, there are 2,586,473 letters, 775,693 words, 31,373 verses, 1,189 chapters and 66 books.

A steel ship will carry about 20 per cent more freight than of the same size made of iron.

Buttering the Dealer's Parsnips

To reverse the old saying—

"When a man uses the advertising columns of the newspaper to tell about his goods he is buttering the parsnips of every dealer who carries them."

He is sending customers to the dealer's store to seek those goods.

He is creating business that for the dealer to take advantage of the created opportunity.

It is natural he should favor newspaper advertising.

Co-operation with the manufacturer's newspaper advertising means increased business for the storekeeper.
